COOPERATION IN THE GRAPE-GROWING LIN

Editor Advertiser: Now, when the small farming has got a pull ahead again by the Governor's speech, it may not be out of the road to draw your attention to the fact that small farming here is hampered by the way the cooperating system is practised. Look, for instance, at the Kaupakaina winery. Some of the shareholders, probably the largest ones, know nothing about grapes and wine before they have it on their table. The consequence of that is that the stock will be watered as soon as practicable, and the profit that ought to go to the farmers, who raise the grapes, will go to pay dividend of the watered stock. This can easily be remedied by adopting the Scandinavian system in cooperation between farmers. That is, that every shareholder has to furnish a set quantity of raw material per share, of his own product. If he fails to do so, he has lost his right to dividend for that year. Next: No more than 6 per cent. a year shall be paid out in dividend. be divided between those who have Bishop Moore and the Rev. John furnished the raw material, regardless

This system has built up the Danish agriculture and it is progressing in Norway. It talks for itself.
